

Dear Valued Broker/Title Company/Closing Agent:

You probably have read about the changes in the market place – the FCC’s “Do Not Fax” rule, formally known as The Telephone Consumer Protection Act of 1991.

New rulings that took effect on January 1, 2005, significantly changed the way mortgage originators, lenders, and settlement service providers communicate with current and new clients. This regulation requires anyone wishing to send clients important information regarding products, services, special promotions, daily rate sheets, and even escrow/closing instructions to secure written authorization from the party they intend to fax and/or email. This has a profound impact on how we conduct business together.

To comply with this new regulation, we ask that you complete this form where indicated with your written authorization on whether we may conduct business through fax, email or both.
